

Bethel University – Bethel Seminary

Indebtedness of 2025 Graduates

(Graduated between July 2024 and June, 2025)

Daniel C. Nelson – December 2, 2025

Of the 77 students that graduated with Masters Degrees from Bethel Seminary between July 1, 2024, and June 30, 2025, 29 (37.7%) borrowed student loans while at Bethel. This is the lowest percentage since we began this debt study in 2009.

The average debt for borrowers was $38,538, the second lowest average since 2010. The median debt was $41,000. These loans reflect the students' borrowing only at Bethel Seminary. The average debt for all 2025 Seminary grads (including non-borrowers) was $14,514.

Female seminary students were more likely to borrow than male students were (42.6%, compared with 30.0% for males), but borrow less ($32,769, compared with $51,360 for males). Students of color were more likely to borrow than were all students (53.3%) and borrowed higher amounts ($44,462).

The “rule-of-thumb” in the student loan industry is that total student borrowing should not exceed 8% - 10% of a borrower's starting gross salary. Multiply the estimated monthly payment by 120 to see the annual starting salary required for the student loan payment to be within 10% of salary. [For example, $550 X 120 = $66,000]. Our average Seminary Masters student borrower would need a starting salary of $52,989 for their student loan payment to be no more than 10% of their salary (presuming they have no other outstanding loans from previous schools). Students whose debt exceeds 10% of their starting salary will need to consolidate loans over a longer repayment period, live more frugally, defer certain plans (home ownership, marriage, etc.) or receive family help in repaying college loans.

There were 5 Doctor of Ministry graduates in 2024-25, of which 4 borrowed during their program (80%). Their average debt from this program was $74,034. Two of the 10 Certificate completers borrowed an average of $14,578.
